LEAKAGE (2011)

Psychologists proved that sometimes human memories are fake. So what if dreams and desires are fake as well? Neither impulsive nor wanted but programmed by parents and culture. How can we know what we really want and who we actually desire to be? How to distinguish our real needs and dreams from the fake ones? How to be yourself if the world around you seems to be an illusion or a phantom? If we are stuck in a surreal semi personality trying to find our way in a limbo like reality that we are not even aware of, how can we possibly be ourselves?

My reflection regarding this issue is that people feel a great dissatisfaction which they can't even trace back to themselves. In my pictures I am trying to capture tension and inquietude of a man who has been hunted by his own illusions.
